The novelty and importance of this design, and the genius and felicity with which it has been executed by the Noble Author, are admitted by the best judges of Chemistry, and particularly by men highly distinguished for the application of Philosophy to mechanical and practical pursuits. To give a list of such names as those of Dr. Pearson, the Bishop of Landaff, &c. in support of this assertion, might be thought improper. The publishers, therefore, refer the public, for a character of this Work, to the different Reviews, which profess to estimate literary and scientific merit: for although the testimony of any one of these might be deemed equivocal, their universal concurrence in the highest commendations of the Earl of Dundonald's Treatise on Chemical Agriculture, cannot but have weight with every mind.

OF A NEW ILLUSTRATION OF THE
SEXUAL SYSTEM OF LINNÆUS,

BY ROBERT JOHN THORNTON, M.D.
LATE OF TRINITY COLLEGE, CAMBRIDGE.

THE Design of this Work is to explain, in a clear and concise Manner, the fundamental Principles of Botany; to illustrate the organized Structure of Plants; their Vitality; the motion of their Juices; the Offices of the Root, Trunk, Branches, Leaves, and Flowers; their Food; their Transpiration and Absorption of Air; their relation to Light and Heat; their Sleep; the Reason for the different Forms of Flowers; the sexual Analogy; the Transmutation of Leaves into Fruit, and of single Flowers into double; the several Arrangements derived from the Fructification; and lastly, the Sexual System of Linnæus, which is so admirably contrived, that the attentive Reader will be enabled after perusing this New Illustration to discover almost in an instant the Name of each unknown Plant which he may have gathered either in the Fields or in the Garden.

Specimens of the Type and Engravings may be seen at Murray and Highley's, where Proposals for the above may be had, and Subscriptions are received.
